

2018 Triennial Meeting of International Committee of Representatives of Indexing Societies (ICRIS)
Wednesday 17 October 15:00 – 18:00, 2018
101 Conference Room, Guang Hua Building, East Wing, Fudan University, Shanghai

Minutes

Representatives

American Society for Indexing (ASI): Frances Lennie

Australian and New Zealand Society of Indexers (ANZSI): Mary Russell (Chair); Glenda Browne

Association of South African Indexers and Bibliographers (ASAIB): Karin McGuirk

China Society of Indexers (CSI): Yang Guanghui and Liu Lijun (Joan)

Deutsches Netzwerk der Indexer (DNI): represented by Pierke Bosschieter

Indexing Society of Canada/Société Canadienne d'indexation (ISC/SCI): Christine Jacobs

Nederlands Indexers Network (NIN): Caroline Diepeveen

Society of Indexers (SI): Mary Coe

The Indexer: Mary Coe

1. Welcome, introductions and regrets
Mary welcomed the attendees. Regrets were recorded from Averill Buchanan (Association of Freelance Editors, Proofreaders and Indexers of Ireland (AFEPI Ireland))
2. Minutes 2015 Triennial meeting held in York, UK, 4 September 2015
The minutes of the 2015 Triennial meeting held in York on 4 September 2015 were accepted as a true and accurate record.
3. Business arising from 2015 Triennial Minutes
  - a. ISO 999 update
Thank you to David Green (SI) committee member ISO/TC46 SC9 WG12 for supplying the report attached.
4. Review of the International Agreement – Suggested amendments
Mary worked through the following suggested amendments
  - a. Inclusion of Association of Freelance Editors, Proofreaders and Indexers of Ireland (AFEPI Ireland) – accepted.
  - b. In item 6 and 8 change ‘will offer a free registration’ to ‘may offer a free registration’
See attached paper for details of proposal.

There was discussion about how Societies would implement this change. While it was suggested guidelines be added to the Terms of Reference, none were developed at the meeting. It is up to each Society to determine if and how they will offer the free registration.

Accepted.

- c. Items 10, 11, and Schedule C, to reflect the new publication arrangements for The Indexer

10. New wording to reflect new publishing arrangements:

The [British] Society of Indexers will be responsible for the management and publication of The Indexer on behalf of all the Societies and Associates. The Indexer will remain the property of the [British] Society of Indexers.

11 Text deleted as this body was never formally constituted.

The production and management of The Indexer will be the responsibility of The Indexer Management Committee

11 Now reads

The appointment of the editor(s) of The Indexer will remain the responsibility of the [British] Society of Indexers.

Section C dot point one wording changed to:

The Indexer Editorial Board is appointed and chaired by the editor(s) of The Indexer. ICRIS may nominate a representative to serve on the Editorial Board (subject to appointment by the Editor) in order to provide a mechanism whereby all the participating Societies and Associate groups or networks are able to make an effective contribution to the development and implementation of policy relating to The Indexer.

Section C dot point two deleted.

Section C dot point four modified notification of price changes. New wording:

Societies and Associate groups or networks will be notified of price changes as far in advance as possible.

All changes accepted.

- d. In Item 3 changes to wording to national-level meetings.

Comments on change:

This language would not preclude offering member rates for regional or chapter meetings; but it would be a more flexible option. With the rise of virtual meetings, we are seeing new issues in terms of meetings; this language would allow us more leeway in managing those.

Accepted with additional wording.

Members of each society will enjoy the right to attend in person national-level meetings and conferences of the other Societies and to purchase publications at the members' rate. Rate charged for local/chapter meetings is at the discretion of the organising body.

ASI noted they currently offer webinars to other Societies at members' rates as a courtesy.

e. Schedule D – SIG changes

Comments on change:

Due to a change of structure of SIGs to committees of ASI (per Internal Revenue Service rules), SIGs are no longer independent entities, so we can no longer allow non-ASI members to hold office due to potential liability issues. Please note that this is in no way a reflection on participation or performance in any SIG.

New wording:

The Special Interest Groups (SIGs) affiliated with the American Society for Indexing are open to members of other Societies and Associate groups or networks; any SIG member may vote on matters brought up in the specific SIG of which they are a member, but only ASI members may hold leadership positions in a SIG.

Accepted

f. Schedule D – remove first dot point.

As a result of accepting 4b, this change was suggested.

Accepted

A copy of the revised version of the International Agreement of Indexing Societies, with agreed changes at Shanghai 2018 is provided. It is important that each Board/Council approve the changes to the International Agreement.

5. Review of the ICRIS Terms of Reference – Suggested amendments

- a. In item 6C change ‘will have their Conference registration waived’ to ‘may have their Conference registration waived’.

This flows on from change in the International Agreement in 4b.

Accepted

- b. Item 8A delete 2018

Accepted

- c. Item 8B Add ‘2018 Shanghai, China

Accepted

- d. Item 8C change wording of link to ICRIS Triennial guidelines

Accepted with removal of the year

- e. Item 8D add item on decision making

There was discussion on the percentage for the majority. It was decided to make it 75 per cent.

New wording:

Ratification of the International Agreement, Terms of Reference and other key decisions are returned to the Council/Board of each Society to decide on. The Coordinator is notified of the Society’s decision via email.

Decision-making is by a 75 per cent majority.

Accepted

- f. Schedule A ICRIS email list members – rewording of introduction

New wording for introductory paragraph:

It is recommended that each society/network have two or three members subscribed to the ICRIS mailing list. Temporary additional subscriptions are handy for persons intending to attend ICRIS meetings, other than the international representative of that particular society or network. Each society or network is responsible for keeping its membership to the mailing list up to date. Updating is done via requests to the list manager. List membership can be checked at: <http://lists.theindexer.org/mailman/listinfo/icris> (password requests can be sent to: icris-request@theindexer.org with the command "password" (no quotes) in the subject line).

Accepted

- g. Schedule A ICRIS email list members – Update email listing

New email list accepted.

It was noted sometimes it is not possible to send emails to the email list using generic email addresses.

Caroline Diepeveen was thanked for her work maintaining the list. It was suggested that Maureen MacGlashan be approached to see if she would be happy to maintain the list in the future.

A copy of the revised version of the ICRIS Terms of Agreement, with agreed changes at Shanghai 2018 is provided. It is important that each Board/Council approve the changes to the ICRIS Terms of Agreement.

6. The Indexer – Update to cover:
- a. New arrangements for publishing The Indexer, subscription process, and ongoing relationship with international indexing societies.
Report attached
  - b. Request to let all subscribers know via email that the latest issues is available electronically.

Formal thanks were given to Society of Indexers and for all their work establishing the new publishing arrangements.

Special thanks were given to Maureen MacGlashan for her work as Editor to The Indexer as she steps down. Mary Coe was welcomed as the new Editor.

There is about a six-week delay before some subscribers receive their printed copies and not all subscribers of The Indexer are members of Indexing Societies. It is hoped, with the new publishing arrangements, all subscribers can be notified when each issue is available online. This may be by email from subscription details. Alternatively, the online system may have a new issue notification facility which subscribers can be given instructions on how to set up.

Mary Coe to investigate.

7. ICRIS webpage – Update
Report attached

Society of Indexers was thanked for continuing to host the ICRIS webpage on The Indexer website.

All Societies are encouraged to make sure details of their conference dates are placed on ICRIS webpage.

It was suggested that Maureen MacGlashan be asked if she would be prepared to maintain the content of the webpage with technical assistance from Rebecca Linford.

8. Informal ICRIS meetings 2015–2018 – Chicago, Montreal, and Cleveland
a. International ‘Indexer locator’. Consider recommendation
See attached paper for details of proposal.

Discussion covered the following points:

- Each Society has some form of ‘Indexer locator’ and all have different arrangements about belonging to the list. Some just charge fees and others have specific skill requirements that need to be met before it is possible to be listed on the Society’s ‘Indexer locator’.
- The logistical complications compiling and maintaining an international indexer locator.

ANZSI had not had time to consult on this matter, and therefore didn't put forward a point-of-view

It was decided that the ICRIS webpage add links to each Society’s ‘Indexer locator’.

Each Society is encouraged to promote the ICRIS webpage on their website.

It was noted that the Special Interest Groups also maintain membership lists and it was suggested these too could receive greater publicity by ASI, on the ICRIS webpage and by other Societies.

9. New business
a. National Indexing Day in Australia, UK and Canada, and prospects for an International Indexing Day in 2019 – discussion.

This item was skipped due to time constraints and will be discussed via the ICIRS email list.

b. Invite Institute of Certified Indexers to join ICRIS
See attached paper for details of proposal put forward by the Coordinator.

Items discussed included:

- ICI is small organisation.
- ICI-certified indexers are already well-served by their own national societies who are signatories to the International Agreement.

- ICI is not an association, society, or a membership organisation. It appears to be a program/service for indexers.
- Societies are non-profit organisations. ICI is an LLC (limited liability corporation), and there is no evidence that it is a non-profit.
- It is unable to provide reciprocal access to conferences/meeting or newsletters as specified in the Agreement.

There is no wording in the International Agreement to support most of these arguments. The exception is item 4

- 4 Each Society and Associate group or network may accept membership applications from individuals outside their own area but will refrain from actively seeking members in areas covered by other Societies.

It was agreed that an invitation not be offered to Institute of Certified Indexers to join ICRIS.

- c. Should ICRIS consider to set up a permanent venue, i.e. in Fudan University, to make the future exchanges and interactions among indexers more convenient and stable?

Chinese Society of Indexers (CSI) was thanked for their offer to set up a permanent venue. The structure of ICRIS and its total lack of funds was explained.

It was agreed Societies enjoy the opportunity to rotate locations. Hence would like to maintain this.

It was suggested that options for electronic or distance participation be explored for Societies unable to send a representative.

This discussion was brief. CSI has strong academic strength. The discussion ended with hope to explore these strengths further during the conference.

- d. A group of Chinese indexers are developing a set of index rules and standards for graduate thesis and dissertation, should they be promoted for international application?

CSI was encouraged in developing these set of index rules and standards for graduate thesis and dissertations. Societies welcome this development and look forward to learning more about it. However, it was agreed they are reluctant to support the rules without examining them first.

10. Appointment of International Coordinator for 2018–2021

Mary presented the proposal that the International Coordinator for 2018–2021 be a shared position between Caroline Diepeveen and Pierke Bosschieter from NIN.

This was agreed.

Caroline and Pierke were welcomed as new International Co-coordinators.

11. Appointment of host for 2021 Triennial Meeting

Possibilities are in Germany or Ottawa, Canada, in US or elsewhere.

After a brief discussion it was decided to accept the combined NIN/DNI offer to explore holding the 2021 Triennial Meeting in Germany or the Netherlands.

If this turns out to be not possible it was suggested that ICS/SCI and ASI consider jointly hosting the 2021 Triennial Meeting.

12. Society reports, given in the papers, on key developments over the last three years and future plans. Brief reports focussing on last 12 months and covering:

- a. Future events to promote indexing, especially ideas that can be shared among societies and implemented by local groups
- b. Strategies for maintaining indexing society membership and attracting new members, including better understanding of reasons for non-membership among people working as indexers.

Meeting closed 18:10 pm

Item 3

The revision of ISO 999:1996 – A brief progress report

David Green, committee member ISO/TC46 SC9 WG12

1 Development background

ISO standards are reviewed every five years to determine if a revision is required to keep them current and relevant.

The latest edition of ISO 999 was published in 1996. While ISO 999 states it is applicable to ‘all types of index, regardless of whether they are produced manually or by computer-assisted methods’, it has long been felt that the standard needs modernising to reflect advances in technology and business practice. Specifically, the standard needs updating to ensure its recommendations remain relevant to all types of indexes (print and electronic) and to all document formats, including ebooks and web indexing.

To this end, in 2015 a Working Group known as “WG12: Indexes and Indexing” was established under the auspices of ISO Technical Committee 46 (Information and documentation) Subcommittee 9 (Identification and description) to work on this revision.

At present, the Working Group has participation from twelve committee members representing seven countries: United States (5), UK (1), Germany (2), Russian Federation (1), Australia (1), South Africa (1) and Italy (1). Earlier this year, Drahomira Cupar from the Department of Information Science at the University of Zadar in Croatia was voted in as the new convenor of WG12, succeeding Janet Shuter who had been project leader for the completion of the original ISO 999 standard in 1992-3.

Sadly, little significant progress has been made since 2016, due partly to technical issues with the ISO website and difficulties co-opting people with expert non-traditional indexing skills onto the Working Group. Several members have also stepped down in recent months.

However, in February 2018 the project was registered in the TC/SC work programme, and within the next few weeks it is hoped work will resume on preparing a working draft.

Status: ISO 999

Stage	Description	Date
10	New project approved	19.09.2016
20	New project registered in TC/SC work programme	22.02.2018

2 Summary of continuing work

2.1 ISO 5963 and ISO 999

The ISO brief requires WG12 to perform a gap analysis between ISO 5963 and ISO 999 to determine whether the former can be withdrawn and its relevant content absorbed by ISO 999. (Note: ISO 5963 was declared obsolescent in the UK several years ago.)

Both standards derive from BS 370, and for the most part the content of ISO 5963 is already represented in ISO 999.

In December 2015 Janet Shuter presented a discussion document outlining in broad terms how the various parts of ISO 5963 related to ISO 999, and identifying relevant content from ISO 5963 that might usefully be incorporated into ISO 999. Specifically, it was suggested that ISO 999 should be updated to contain new subsections on whole-document indexing and on indexing with a thesaurus, thus effectively incorporating those parts of ISO 5963 Sections 5–7 which are still current.

2.2 ISO 25964 and ISO 999

Maintaining and updating a thesaurus is now covered by ISO 25964-1:2011, Thesauri for information retrieval. It is suggested that some definitions used in ISO 999 should follow ISO 25964-1.

2.3 Design specification for ISO 999

In December 2015 Janet Shuter circulated a document outlining the scope and objectives of a proposed revision to ISO 999. This was a preliminary document intended only as a starting point for discussion. It envisaged a revised ISO 999 divided into four parts:

1. preliminaries
2. basic principles of indexing [mostly ISO 999 content updated/ improved]
3. form and presentation [different ways of constructing/ displaying indexes, including embedding and hyperlinking]
4. applicability to various kinds of documents/ collections [from print to electronic media, including ebooks, online collections of documents, web indexing, etc.]

A new section covering “criteria for indexing software” was also mooted.

Item 4b: In item 6 and 8 change ‘will offer a free registration’ to ‘may offer a free registration’

As the Agreement stands:

- Societies holding conferences are expected to pay for registrations for one person from each Society.
- Other Societies are not holding conferences and therefore not able to return the favour.
- Associate members attending non-Triennial conferences are not officially entitled to free registration.

Some observations:

- The nature of conferences is changing. Societies are holding shorter (one to two-day) events. Some are still calling them conferences and open them up to ICRIS members with free registration. Others are calling them seminars and they are not open to ICRIS member with free registration.
- Are the costs involved in meeting the free registration requirement deterring some Societies from holding conferences?
- Some Societies offer partial reimbursements to their official delegate to attend some conferences in addition to the free registration.
- Other delegates at their Society’s conference are surprised official international delegates receive free registration. Are they happy to subsidise this?

Some points for consideration:

- As the agreement stands is it still the best and fairest arrangement?
- Do we need to define what a conference is?
- Should hosting Societies continue to pay for free registrations or perhaps be able to decide if they will or decide how many they will offer?
- Should Society and Associate members seeking free registration be encouraged to submit a suggestion to present a paper or workshop at the conference in return for free registration?
- Should Associate members be entitled to free registration at non-Triennial conferences?
- Should Societies sending official representatives pay the registration fee?

Item 6: *The Indexer

The Society of Indexers (SI) has signed a contract with Liverpool University Press (LUP) to publish The Indexer from 2019 but will continue to be ultimately responsible for its management, on behalf of the international indexing community. (More information on the outsourcing process is given in the appendix.) The new arrangement covers the production, marketing and subscription management of the journal. The main change subscribers will see will be a change to a more standard journal format and a striking new design, which is currently under development. The journal will continue to be published four times a year (March, June, September and December) in print and online.

The content of the journal will remain solely in the control of the editor, Mary Coe, who has been working with the retiring editor, Maureen MacGlashan, during 2018, gradually taking over full responsibility. On the editorial side (and as indicated in the proposed changes to the International Agreement), Mary Coe and the SI propose replacing the current International Advisory Board with an Editorial Board that will include an ICRIS representative. ICRIS will be invited to nominate this representative, who will be subject to appointment by the Editor. The purpose of creating the new Board is to involve a range of professional indexers and academics in actively reviewing editorial policy and content. Appointment of an ICRIS representative whose sole purpose will be representing the interests of the international body on the Board will provide ICRIS with an active and purposeful role.

Subscription prices for members of indexing societies will not change, and these will continue to be handled through the SI office, which will liaise closely with LUP. As soon as each issue is available electronically, the information will be posted on the ICRIS list in order for it to be passed on to the members of each society.

Appendix: The outsourcing story

The Indexer has been published since 1958, growing from a modest 28-page, biannual newsletter-type publication to the present 48-page A-4 quarterly publication with its wide-ranging content, published by the Society of Indexers (SI) on behalf of the international indexing community. On taking up the editorial role in 2004, Maureen MacGlashan began putting the journal on a much more professional footing, but it has continued to fall behind on marketing and subscription management in particular. Outsourcing has been seen as the only realistic way forward, with production and management handled by a publisher with the resources and expertise lacking amongst indexing societies. Maureen pursued this with vigour, but negotiations in 2005 and again in 2010 failed to reach a satisfactory outcome and she continued to oversee all aspects of the journal's production, in addition to her core editorial role.

With Maureen's retirement on the horizon, in 2016 it was time to revisit the outsourcing option. Online surveys of the readership confirmed the view that the international indexing community appreciates its professional journal and the SI Executive Board agreed that its future must be secured. Initial negotiations moved only slowly and by late 2017 a realistic proposal was not yet on the table. With the journal entering its 60th anniversary year and Mary Coe having been appointed to take over the editorial reins, around a dozen journal publishers were approached. After a time-consuming process involving many phone calls, Skype discussions, email correspondence and, in one case, a face-to-face meeting, three proposals were eventually submitted, and following a last-minute flurry of emails, a contract was signed with Liverpool University Press (LUP). One of the smaller university presses, it is the UK's third oldest, and has received a number of awards for its innovative and agile approach to publishing. It has a particular strength in working with learned societies and associations, and an initial meeting at the LUP offices confirmed the impression that this will be a great company to work with. We hope that this new publishing partnership, and with a new editor, marks the beginning of an exciting new chapter in the journal's development.

Item 7: ICRIS webpage

While much of the content currently on The Indexer website will gradually move to the Liverpool University Press website, SI will continue to host and manage the site and the ICRIS webpage will therefore remain in place for the foreseeable future. ICRIS will be consulted about any significant changes to the webpage going forward. As noted in the proposed revision of the ICRIS Terms of Reference, contact details will need to be updated to reflect changes in personnel in each society.

Item 9

International ‘Indexer Locator’

Indexing is an international activity, with many publishers looking for suitably qualified indexers around the globe. Indexing jobs are allocated to indexers who meet the publishers’ specifications on subject knowledge, expertise, speed and price. Location is far less of an issue.

At present, publishers are restricted to the ‘Indexer locator’ listings (also known as Directory of Professional Indexers, Indexers Available, Register of Indexers Available, etc.) of their country’s specific indexing society.

The obvious step to overcome these limitations is to make the individual ‘Indexer Locator’ listings available internationally. This concept is not new. Max McMaster, of ANZSI, raised this issue at the ICRIS Triennial meeting in Brighton, UK, in 2012. More recently, Katharina Munk, of DNI, proposed a similar idea at the ICRIS Informal Meeting, in Cleveland, Ohio, in April 2018. Katharina suggested improving the ICRIS webpage links so that users are taken directly to the various society directories.

This is an admirable idea, however realistically most publishers are unlikely to access the ICRIS webpage, so limiting their opportunity to find the links to the various society directories. To overcome this difficulty, the following three-step strategy is proposed.

Step 1

As an initial step in developing an international ‘Indexer Locator’, each society should provide links from their own ‘Index Locator’ web page to the ‘Index locator’ web pages of its sister societies. This would entail adding seven or eight links together with wording along the following lines: “For additional indexer options, consider the subject skills of indexers from our sister societies around the world”. This would be fair for all members listed, but more importantly, would provide publishers with the opportunity to find indexers from outside their immediate catchment area.

The major advantage of this strategy for each society is that apart from adding links to each sister society’s ‘Indexer Locator’, no other work is required. It is assumed that members who meet each society’s criteria for inclusion on their ‘Index Locator’ list have the appropriate indexing skills and specific subject knowledge to warrant the listing.

Step 2

At present, the level of information available on each ‘Locator’ list varies. This is particularly true for individual members’ profiles. Ideally, there should be global consensus on a standard list of information fields and a standard list of subjects, so that a publisher searching on one ‘Locator’ list could implement the same search on another list. Although attaining consensus on fields and categories would take time, there are considerable benefits in doing so.

Step 3

Consolidating each society’s ‘Locator’ list into a larger database is the ultimate aim. However, this will be harder to achieve. Although one society or ICRIS could host the database, developing a strategy to maintain and update records will be the most difficult issue to overcome.

Recommendation

Implementing Step 1 is both an achievable and desirable outcome that will give members of indexing societies around the world a presence in the global market, while also allowing publishers to select from a broader range of suitable indexes.

Item 9b Institute of Certified Indexers (ICI)

About ICI

The Institute of Certified Indexers (ICI) was founded in 2010. From their website:

Bringing standards to the field of indexing, the Institute of Certified Indexers offers indexers the opportunity to gain professional certification. When hiring an indexer with certification from ICI, a client can be assured that the certified indexer has (1) demonstrated a significant level of skill, familiarity with indexing techniques, and ability to produce high-quality indexes; and (2) continued to stay current in the field by a commitment to ongoing learning.

The company maintains offices in Lewes, DE and is incorporated in the state of Virginia.

Founders:

Enid Zafran, Managing Founder

Fred Leise, Associate Founder

Kate Mertes, Associate Founder

Pilar Wyman, Associate Founder

ICI is an independent standards organization not affiliated in any way with any indexing membership organization in the US or elsewhere.

Work of ICI

ICI has a stringent certification process for indexers. It also requires members to be recertified every three years.

Since 2014 it has run the annual Purple Pen Contest. “The award is open to new indexers who completed an indexing course in the last five years and submit an index done for payment (not a practice or pro bono index)”. Each application is assessed against their Indexing best practices (http://www.certifiedindexers.com/indexing\_best\_practices.pdf).

The Institute of Certified Indexers (ICI) actively promotes standards in indexing in a non-commercial environment.

Ability to join ICRIS

At the 2016 Triennial meeting in York:

The issue of whether there was any restriction on having more than one indexing-related Society from a country represented on ICRIS at a future date was raised. The emphatic answer was no.

(<https://www.theindexer.org/files/minutes/icris-1509.pdf> Item 10A)

Recommendation

As a professional organisation promoting indexing standards, it is recommended that ICI be invited to join ICRIS.

Mary Russell, August 2018

Item 12 Society Reports

The following reports were presented:

Report from the American Society for Indexing for the ICRIS meeting October 2018

Key Developments over the last three years:

- ASI has held several successful conferences, including the joint-conference with ISC/SCI in Chicago (2016), and annual conferences in Portland, Maine (2017) and Cleveland, OH (2018). Chapters and SIGs have also held multiple events, including both in-person and virtual meetings.
- We revised our by-laws and our policies and procedures.
- We have had a positive turnaround in our finances, due in large part to our new management company. Our financial position is good.
- Membership remains steady with a slight decline in some years. We would like to see more growth of new members and more retention of members.
- In 2016 we conducted a salary survey. We try to do one every five years or so.
- We presented multiple webinars on topics including biographies, names, and various indexing tools and software. We also presented in-depth online courses on index structure, medical indexing, and getting started in indexing.
- The ASI indexing course continues to train new indexers.

Future Plans

We will be holding a strategic planning session this October to help us better prepare for the next 3-5 years. The main topics of discussion will be how to best serve our Chapters and SIGs, how to improve our educational offerings, the management of ASI publications, and exploration of ASI's role in the publishing industry. From this session we hope to have a clearer vision of how we can support our mission to promote excellence in indexing and to serve the needs of indexers.

Report from the Australian and New Zealand Society of Indexers, for the ICRIS meeting October 2018

A very significant achievement for ANZSI in the past year was the National Indexing Day (NID) promotion. Celebrated on 29 March 2018, in line with the Society of Indexers' and Indexing Society of Canada / Société canadienne d'indexation events, NID involved coordination by Council and great deal of work by a few volunteers. Promotion of the event included a Twitter campaign (using the international #indexday hashtag and specific local tags); Facebook posts; press releases posted to editor's and librarians' e-lists; paid advertisements in appropriate magazines; and activities organised by local ANZSI groups. The President, Madeleine Davis, was interviewed on national radio (Australian Broadcasting Corporation), and a writer member of ANZSI, Denise Sutherland, was interviewed on a writers blog. Mary Coe and Madeleine Davis gave a joint presentation to students at the School of Information Studies, Charles Sturt University, with discussion covered the different types of indexing, both back-of-book and online, metadata, resources available and career paths in our profession. It's been clear from correspondence to Council since NID that it raised the profile of indexers among editors', writers' and librarians' groups. We will repeat the exercise in 2019, building on our experience this year.

Another significant achievement was the completion and publication of the index to the first 20 years of the Australian Society of Indexers/Australian and New Zealand Society of Indexers Newsletter (1973–1992). This project was carried out by the Melbourne Indexers group of ANZSI, coordinated by Mary Russell. It was a volunteer project of some magnitude and complexity which now gives us systematic subject and name access to the early issues of the newsletter. It has already proved its value in preparation of background and historical papers. Melbourne Indexers, with other volunteers, are now engaged in indexing issues post-1992.

ANZSI acknowledges the wonderful contribution made by Maureen MacGlashan in editing The Indexer for many years, and is proud to know that ANZSI member and former president Mary Coe will be succeeding Maureen as Editor later in 2018.

The biennial John Simkin Medal awards for excellence in indexing are being offered again in 2018, with an announcement of results due in late 2018.

The ANZSI newsletter is published six times per year. The Newsletter, the website (www.anzsi.org) and mass emails to members are the main vehicles for communication from Council and among ANZSI membership.

Local ANZSI groups in Canberra (ACT region), NSW, South Australia, Melbourne (Victoria) and Aotearoa/New Zealand organise a range of activities, networking and professional development opportunities for members.

ANZSI is a small organisation run by volunteers. Streamlining of administration and assistance to volunteer office-bearers have been achieved in 2018 by the employment of an administrative officer and a bookkeeper. Council continues to review policies and procedures as necessary. The website commerce system, which manages membership subscriptions and other payments, has been replaced with a more stable, robust and easy-to-manage system.

One face-to-face indexing workshop has been presented by ANZSI in 2018 – in Canberra, on annual report indexing. Further face-to-face training is planned for 2019, after NID 2019 publicity. Some ANZSI members have participated in conferences and webinars presented by sister indexing societies.

Future activities and priorities for ANZSI Council include promotion of indexing and indexers as opportunities arise; National Indexing Day 2019; promoting membership of ANZSI (including a project, just started, to identify reasons for non-renewal of membership); systematic organisation of our digital archives; and promotion of the Accredited Indexer scheme.

Report to International Committee of Representatives of Indexing Societies (ICRIS)
7th Triennial Meeting, October 17 to 19, 2018, Fudan University, Shanghai, China

Key Developments over Past Three Years

1. Created a Vision Statement in 2016: “Accessible information; informed people”

2. The Ewart-Daveluy Award for Indexing Excellence

The award is presented each year to an individual who has created an index that demonstrates outstanding expertise, ability to analyze complex text and ability to design an index that significantly enhances reader use of the text. The award consists of a framed certificate accompanied by a letter. It was inaugurated in 2015.

- 2015: François Trahan. Ancient Pathways, Ancestral Knowledge by Nancy J. Turner (McGill- Queen’s University Press)
- 2016: Mary Newberry. The Letterbooks of John Evelyn edited by Douglas D.C. Chambers and David Galbaith (University of Toronto Pr.)
- 2017: Judy Dunlop. One Child Reading: My Autobiography by Margaret Mackey (University of Alberta Pr.)
- 2018: Audrey McClellan. Churchill and Fisher: Titans at the Admiralty by Barry Gough (Seaforth Publishing)

3. The Mary Newberry Mentorship Program

The ad hoc committee presented its proposal to the executive committee in Spring 2018. The program is scheduled to start in January 2019 with the following guidelines:

- Mentorship will be available to all ISC members, regardless of level of indexing experience.
- The focus of mentorship will be driven by the specific needs of those seeking mentorship. We want to help indexers expand their skills and business from whatever stage they are at.
- Mentorship will take place in two-month blocks, with the option for renewal.
- A nominal fee will be charged, most of which will be an honorarium for the mentor.

4. Website Renewal,

The new website was launched in October 2017 with a video highlighting the new features.

5. Constitution Revised, 2017

The ISC/SCI Constitution was reworded to remove ambiguities, updated and restructured. The Constitution itself, which must be voted on and approved by a two-thirds majority of the votes cast at an AGM, was separated from policies, which are maintained and revised as needed by the executive.

6. Conferences

2015, Vancouver

2016, Chicago in conjunction with ASI

2017, Montréal

2018, Winnipeg

2019, Ottawa

Key Future Developments

1. Participate in International Indexing Day

2. Development of new Policies and Procedures for the Bulletin which is undergoing a change in production and is being given a new look.

3. A new communications plan is being developed for coordinating and expanding efforts

4. Special Projects:

The special project committee was struck to examine and recommend suggestions for worthwhile projects that would benefit the members and the association. Among the suggestions being considered are bursaries for various specific populations and online subscriptions.

NIN Report 2015-2018

One of the achievements that we are very proud of, is the complete redesign of our website: www.indexers.nl It now has a much more attractive look and layout and it is also much more user-friendly to maintain.

The new website has a blog feature, which replaces our newsletter NINieuws. We have also recently added an indexer locator page to the website. Any NIN-member who has completed either the SI-course or the Berkeley extension course, or published two indexes in the preceding year, is entitled to an entry on the indexer locator page.

Another achievement of which we are very proud is the half-day conference that we organised together with DNI at the Frankfurt Bookfair of 2016. This half-day conference coincided with the Netherlands and Flanders being the guest theme of the Bookfair at Frankfurt and also with the tenth anniversary of both networks (more or less). It was an excellent opportunity to discuss indexing with our German colleagues, publishers and software developers, all of whom are present at the Book fair, of course.

For the very near future we are planning to add an emergency scheme to our indexer locator feature. All indexers that have an entry on the indexer locator page of our website, are obliged to join the emergency scheme. In this way, it is ensured that there is always a colleague who has access to the most recent backup files and contact details in case of a calamity preventing an indexer from working. We expect to implement this scheme in early 2019.

We are aware that we need to revive our website blog and become more visible on social media. We intend to focus on enlarging our membership. Our membership has diminished somewhat, as a number of our members have recently retired. Fortunately, several people have expressed an interest in becoming an indexer. We are hopeful, therefore, that we will soon make up for our loss in membership.

Our ambitions for the future are to co-organise the next Triennial ICRIS meeting with DNI at a location in Germany or the Netherlands. We are also looking into ways to celebrate national indexing day in the Netherlands. Sadly, awareness about indexing is very rare on the European Continent, and the Netherlands is no exception.

Report to ICRIS 2018 from Society of Indexers

(with apologies for the length but I felt it was important to highlight the main issues that concern us in running the Society, issues that may resonate with other societies)

Marketing and publicity. Raising the profile of indexing is vital both in making potential members aware of our existence and in ensuring that potential clients use our members to index their publications. Like all the societies, our website is our public face and in 2016 we took the long-overdue decision to commission a completely new website from a professional website design business, to give a more professional and contemporary look. This proved to be a bigger undertaking than originally envisaged, especially in connection with the new Directory of Professional Indexers that replaces the old Indexers Available. But autumn 2017 finally saw the site go live, together with a new forum system for member discussions.

As well as the website, social media of course play a key role in publicising both indexing in general and SI in particular. 2017 saw the first National Indexing Day, conducted entirely on social media; building on this success, for NID 2018 we held an event in London for publishers. With a series of presentations focusing on current indexing practices, evaluating good and bad indexes, and digital developments regarding embedded and linked indexes for ebooks, participants went away very much better informed and appreciative of what we do. We plan to run a similar event next year, and also continue our successful in-house workshops for publishers. In addition, encouraging more members to get involved in publicity activities through local events is a long-term aim, perhaps through local groups.

The Indexer. Negotiations to outsource production of The Indexer have occupied many hours over the last year, but as reported separately, these eventually reached a successful conclusion with the signing of a contract with Liverpool University Press. The new arrangement coincides with Mary Coe taking over the helm following the retirement of Maureen MacGlashan after 13 years as editor.

Conferences. For our scattered community of freelance indexers, conferences are an important event in the calendar and the only opportunity for face-to-face training. Our 2016 conference was held in a quirky central-Birmingham venue with a one-day non-residential format that proved popular with attendees, many of whom arrived the night before to meet up with colleagues. In 2017 our one-day diamond anniversary conference in Oxford was timed to immediately precede the Book Index Symposium at the Bodleian, giving an opportunity to interact with academics with an interest in the history of indexes, and to bring the perspective of modern indexers to them.

Although successful, one-day conferences can seem rather hectic, with insufficient networking time; this year we built in an extra afternoon and also held the conference alongside that of the Society for Editors and Proofreaders (SfEP) at Lancaster University, with a joint gala dinner and plenary session. Feedback suggests that this arrangement worked well – we have many issues of mutual concern – but parallel conferences should only take place every now and then. Looking ahead, we are currently conducting surveys to establish what sort of conferences members prefer and why fewer than normal attended this year. Whether a clear pattern will emerge is doubtful – our members are a diverse lot – but there is certainly some enthusiasm for the traditional two-day format, with a more relaxed timetable that enables members to justify the travel time and costs. Perhaps the real conclusion is that varying the format from year to year accommodates the needs of different members.

Membership issues. During the last few years numbers have been declining, the inevitable result of an ageing membership, but now seem to be levelling off, with a small but steady influx of new members, who generally join to enrol on the training course and work towards a new career, rather than simply having an interest in indexing. A close relationship with the SfEP not only helps to raise the profile of indexing amongst editors and proofreaders, but also encourages them to consider joining us and adding indexing to their skills portfolio, especially if they may have already done some indexing. But other than SfEP members, we have no strategies for identifying and attracting potential new members, including those already working as indexers. Anecdotal evidence would suggest, however, that many non-member indexers are actually the authors themselves.

Retaining members depends in part on providing worthwhile benefits, both tangible and intangible. A change in our membership structure means that all professionally qualified members are now entitled to a free entry in the directory and we also have a dedicated website forum where jobs can be advertised to qualified members. Overall, the new website forum system has been received positively and statistics show that the level of communication between members has increased. The forums also enable members to air concerns about SI activities. Mutual support through the forums, and through local groups and conferences, is one of those membership benefits that can't be expressed in monetary terms but is very much valued. On the networking front, local group meetings of SI and SfEP are now open to all members of both societies. In addition, we have recently negotiated a range of member benefits in the form of discounts on a range of related products and services.

Training and professional development. One of our most important activities, especially for new members, is running the training course, supplemented by a range of online workshops and face-to-face workshops at conferences. The training course and online workshops are continually being developed and improved, to take account of new techniques, especially in relation to embedded indexing and the digital revolution. In terms of encouraging professional development, the existing Fellowship application process has been suspended due to poor take-up in recent years and the whole future of a higher-level qualification is under consideration.

The role of volunteers. With one paid member of staff (our office manager), we depend on the commitment and dedication of those members willing to give their time and energy to running the Society, often with little financial reward. With a falling membership, the pool of potential volunteers is limited, leading to problems in succession planning, but a pleasing trend over the last couple of years has been the willingness of several mid-career members, and some at an earlier stage, to respond positively to suggestions that they might play a larger role. I am writing this report having just retired as chair (for the second time!) and feel the future of the Society is in good hands.

Postscript. 2017 has in one way been the end of an era, with the death of our remaining founder member, Elizabeth Wallis, a key figure in the Society for a great many years, most notably as Registrar, and someone who was always very encouraging to new members as they were establishing their indexing careers.
